Cargill Bill of Lading/Delivery Procedures: Human Health & Safety Considerations Cargill facilities, carriers and customers may consider regular contact with transportation documentation as a potential pathway to increase the risk of exposure to COVID-19. 2 LEGAL\45455733\1 To allay the concerns of all parties, Cargill instructs all of its facilities and carriers who are receiving or delivering Cargill goods to not insist on a personal sign-off on the relevant transportation documentation (i.e. bill of lading and/or delivery receipt), if, and only if, the receiving personnel refuse to do so. In this event, we ask the Cargill employee and/or a Carrier's driver to legibly print the following notations on the Bill of Lading: 1. COVID, Name, and employee number of the person who refuses to sign; 2. Date and time of the delivery if not listed on the BOL or delivery receipt; and 3. If needed, describe any exceptions taken by the receiver as to the condition of the Cargill product at time of receipt or delivery. If the receiving personnel are willing to personally sign off on the transportation documentation upon delivery or pickup. This procedure will continue to be in effect until it is determined by Cargill that COVID19 no longer poses a danger to Cargill, our vendors, and our customers. Cargill thanks all its transportation partners for their continuing assistance and cooperation throughout this difficult period, and remains, Thank you Eric
